Summary Conclusions

The SIG received a briefing from Bob Hormats, Beryl Sprinkel and Henry Nau on the meeting of the Personal Representatives held at Rambouillet, France April 23-25. Sprinkel indicated that some progress was being made on the U.S. initiative on economic policy coordination. A sub-group of the Personal Representatives will meet on May 14 to determine if specific agreement on this point can be reached. Hormats indicated that the French paper on technology was not yet available. However, it had become apparent that the French intend to use this paper as a "launching pad" for a number of their ideas. They seemed to be proposing that the Summit endorse a program of action which would be laid out in the paper. Members of the SIG expressed concern that such an important document was not yet available for consideration. (A resume of the briefing is contained in the attached memorandum from Hormats to the Cabinet Council on Economic Affairs.)

The SIG reviewed the status of the materials which had been prepared for the President's briefing book. Hormats urged that each agency responsible for briefing material review the papers which they had submitted to ensure that the prescribed format had been vigorously followed. He recalled that the contents and format of the book had been approved by the President. Several members of the SIG expressed their concern that they had not had the opportunity to clear papers of interest to their agencies. It was agreed that the State Department would circulate on March 30 all papers as received, cleared or uncleared, by COB April 29.

Hormats reviewed the format for a press background book and indicated the subject headings contemplated for that book, including:

- General Background
- Macroeconomic and Monetary Issues
- Trade
- Relations with Developing Countries
- Energy
- East-West Economic Relations
- Technology

He requested members of the SIG to submit material in the public domain, such as important speeches, key testimony, etc. to him for inclusion in the press book.
